

Preserve Your Precious Family Memories

Have you ever wished that the stories your grandparents used to tell you had been put down in writing and saved forever?

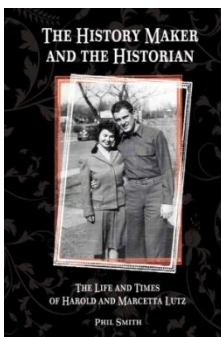

Would you like to pass the lessons your parents taught you on to your children, their children and future generations?

Would you like to remain alive forever in the minds of your descendants?

Now you can, with the help of Your Family Storyteller. We take the memories of your family – your grandparents who came across the Atlantic, your parents who went through the Great Depression and WWII, your own experiences – and through interviews and comprehensive research, turn your unique story into a published book that will be in your family for generations to come.

We are Phil and Glenda Smith, founders of Your Family Storyteller. With a combined 63 years of experience in professional communications, we are uniquely suited to prepare your family story. We combine a love of history with interviewing, research and writing skills to produce a book that reads like a novel and puts your family members' lives into historical perspective.

We Love WWII Veterans

We love to tell the stories of those members of the Greatest Generation whose courage and sacrifice preserved freedom in the world. Our book “The History Maker and the Historian” was about Harold and Marcetta Lutz, two of Arvada’s leading citizens. Harold served in North Africa during WWII and his letters back home to his wife comprise a fascinating chapter in the book.

Your family has a story to tell that future generations should know. Let us tell it.
